it is expected to become three times as common in the next 40 years as life expectancy increases